Al-Akhbar	24-Mar-23	بعد بأسول... جميع يضم إلى راضي تأجيل العمل بالتوقيت الصيفي	Unknown	The article discusses the controversy surrounding the decision to delay the implementation of daylight saving time in Lebanon. Samir Geagea, leader of the Lebanese Forces Party, expressed his opposition to this decision, echoing a political and public wave of disapproval.	https://al-akhbar.com/Politics/360254
Al-Akhbar	27-Mar-23	«التوقيت الشتوي» يثير الإرباك والانقسام... يدحج بنذا وحيداً في جلسة مجلس الوزراء	Unknown	The article discusses the confusion, disruption and division produced by the decision of Caretaker Prime Minister Najib Mikati to postpone implementing daylight saving time until April 20th, contrary to Lebanon's longstanding practice of adjusting to daylight saving time at the end of March. This decision caused a divide among the Lebanese, leading to a call for an urgent meeting to discuss the implications of this change and its effects on the country. Despite attempts to justify the decision as an administrative measure, many criticized the lack of consultation with relevant parties and the abrupt nature of the change. Institutions, including the Maronite Patriarchate, schools, political parties, and media outlets, announced plans to defy the government's decision, maintaining daylight saving time as per international standards. The decision was reversed later, with the Council of Ministers deciding to return to daylight saving time.	https://al-akhbar.com/Politics/360324
Al-Akhbar	27-Mar-23	مجلس الوزراء يقرر العودة إلى التوقيت الصيفي بعد 48 ساعة	Unknown	The article reports on the Council of Ministers' decision to revert to daylight saving 48 hours after initially deciding to maintain standard time. This reversal came amid widespread confusion, backlash and dissatisfaction, highlighting a broader issue of decision-making and governance in Lebanon.	https://al-akhbar.com/Politics/360338
Al-Akhbar	28-Mar-23	توقيت صيفي - شوي تحت سقف واحد: لا حدود للفوضى	Bazzi, Fouad	The article discusses the chaos resulting from Lebanon's rapid shifts between standard and daylight saving time within a 48-hour period. It reflects on the widespread noncompliance and rebellion from various sectors, including Christian parties and educational institutions. The article also discusses the deep-seated divisions and the challenge of governance in Lebanon.	https://al-akhbar.com/Community/360367
Al-Akhbar	28-Mar-23	موقف جنيلات عبر وزير التربية أربك رئيسي المجلس والحكومة: قصة نبيه بري مع تقديم الساعة	Ibrahim, Rula	The article discusses the decision to delay the implementation of daylight saving time in Lebanon particularly during the month of Ramadan. It reflects that this is not a new issue, that it has precedents over the past three years, and that the core objection initially came from Mohamed El-Hout, the Chairman of Middle East Airlines, due to the complications such adjustments would cause to the aviation schedule. The article discusses the backlash and the resulting complexities of the issue. Moreover, the article highlights the challenges of governance and decision-making in Lebanon, where even seemingly minor issues like time adjustment can spiral into significant political and sectarian debates, reflecting the broader tensions and divisions within the country.	https://al-akhbar.com/Politics/360385
Al-Akhbar	28-Mar-23	الإعلام اللبناني يخيم سمومه الطائفية: يا زمان الفيدرالية	Nemr, Nizar	The article discusses the media's role in exacerbating sectarian tensions in Lebanon, particularly in the context of the controversy over the decision to delay the implementation of daylight saving time in Lebanon. It highlights how a simple decision became a battleground for sectarian and political divisions, with various media outlets and political figures exploiting the situation to further their own agendas. The article criticizes the Lebanese media for dramatizing the daylight saving time debate, accusing them of neglecting the country's real issues in favour of sensationalism and sectarian polarization. The article calls for a more responsible and less divisive approach from both the media and political leaders, urging them to focus on the common good rather than exploiting sectarian divisions for political gain.	https://al-akhbar.com/Media_Tv/360364
